Looking Back

*Looking back
through the years,
We've had laughter
and we've had tears.*

*We've worked together
and have fallen apart.
We've all been clever
and done something not so smart.*

*We've won at sports
and were often defeated.
We've shown school spirit
and made comments unneeded.*

*All in all
we've become a whole.
This should be remembered;
All should know.*

*So put aside
the memories you may regret
And cherish those you'll never forget.*

*It's time to look ahead;
leave the past behind.
We're graduating now;
our futures we must find.*

High School Reunion Leads to Destruction of Earth

Well, not exactly - but it was one heck of a good time

June 18, 2008

The West Rutland Class of 1998 originally planned to have their 10-year reunion at good old Westside, but the advent of Heather Pittrich acquiring sole ownership of Jamaica changed everything. In the truest sense of the word hospitality, Heather invited everyone to her estate in Kingston.

Heather had just mailed the last invitation when she spotted a clearance sale across the street. She hopped into her Chevy Cavalier and darted across the highway. Suddenly, she heard a horrendous screech followed by a deafening thud, and then everything went black.

She awoke to see two familiar faces. One she was happy to see, and the other was Greg Czachor. John Pietryka, trying to avoid a lawsuit, apologized for hitting Heather with his "Alternative Fabrics" delivery truck. Heather looked around and realized that she was in Beav's Auto Body Shop (again). Greg informed her that her car was totaled and charged her $50 for the assesment.

The trio of friends, reunited by chance, proceeded to Heather's gargantuan estate. They entered her mansion to find the surprise of their lives. Led by an all-too familiar face was a platoon of hostile U.S. troops. Meeting little resistance, the platoon quickly took Heather, John, and Greg into custody. They were led by a man the three could not help but recognize: their old friend, Heith Cardi.

Within minutes, the crew found themselves aboard a military plane headed for Florida. They arrived shortly thereafter and were received by over thirty military police. Accompanied by these officers was another familiar face, Trisha Amaral. Trisha informed Heather that her authority in Jamaica was no more. Trisha began scribbling on a distinguished-looking notepad, often referring to her "Study on Human Behavior." When finished with her note-taking, she told an officer to send in Erin Emmons with her professionally-trained drug sniffing dogs. Everything was clean. Afterwards, Trisha muttered something about "The Reign of Generation X" coming to an end.

Heather, John, and Greg were taken as captives to a small cell, where they were left unattended for hours. Interrupting the monotony, a strangely familiar voice came from afar. Matt Lavin was before them and an officer was opening the cell door. At this time they realized that Mr. Lavin had used his "Corporate Influences" to bail them out. Being the entrepreneur of an international fruit corporation known as "I Like Apples" was showing one of its many benefits. Lavin and the other three then retrieved Heith, Erin, and Trisha from their respective posts and led the entire group to his corporate jet.

The plane landed in Boston after a long flight. From there they drove to Fenway Park to see a baseball game and reunite with a few other Westside alumni. They arrived just in time for the National Anthem, and spotted another blast from the past. Down on the field singing the anthem was Erika Wakker. Erika was on vacation from an exhausting career as an actress in Spain. She had lived in Spain since she graduated high school, and had forgotten virtually all English she had ever known except for the lyrics to "The Star Spangled Banner."

The game began, and All-Star outfielder Jamie Norton celebrated his return to the lineup by hitting his 25th homer of the season. He was back in the lineup after four weeks on the DL. World-renowned physical therapist Johnni Galbicsek had helped Norton recover from an injury that doctors said would end his career. Johnni was accustomed to working with famous athletes such as Kobe Bryant, Tiger Woods, and Olympic snowboarder Joe Farley.

After the game, the rapidly-growing group of Westside alumni made plans to meet Jamie, Johnni, and Erika at a local restaurant, but not until after Erika went to her favorite fashion designer Steph Senecal to pick out something to wear. Steph owned a growing chain of rapidly-growing clothing stores entitled "Latino Fashion."

At the restaurant everyone saw Farley at a table by himself and decided to join him. Amanda Palmer, the world-class chef of the restaurant, treated the entire crew to a complimentary chicken nugget feast. Halfway through the meal, the restaurant was barricaded by Burger King owner and cross-town rival Mike Hughes and his bodyguard, Corey Coleman. Mike's plans for a Westside Whopper Bash had been ruined, and Amanda and her catering services were the culprits.

Realizing the food was free, Mike and Corey sat down and joined their former classmates. Joe ducked out early for his appointment with his sports' psychiatrist, Loren Allen. Loren had helped Joe cope with the pressures of his stardom when he won the gold medal for snowboarding in 2006. Arriving shortly thereafter was Steve Lafond, who did not have an appointment, but wanted to invite Loren and Joe to meet him and the rest of the class at the Boston Mechanics' Convention which, as the owner of Lafond's Auto, Steve had planned to attend.

The three arrived at the convention and met up with Tim Severance, the owner of Severance's Several Subaru Services.. Once again they spotted Greg Czachor, with all of his former classmates he had met along the way. As they all gathered together, a newscast appeared on a nearby television. Reporting live from Brazil was Ana Candida Zanesco da Cunha with a story about the launch of a new spacecraft that was designed to make extended space travel possible. Ana announced that Rick Bizon would be the captain of the ship known as "A. Business." Of course, takeoff would be delayed until after Cpt. Bizon's High School reunion.

Coincidentally, Robyn King arrived at the convention with her sixth grade class. Her class was studying automotive repair and movie production, and had come to Boston to attend the convention as well as observe the making of a movie based on the famous work of comic book artist Dana Sloan. While there, Robyn planned to visit Jolynn Connors, who was in charge of the Computer Generated Imaging of the film.

Finally, the West Rutland class of 1998 had been reunited, and those who were not yet present planned to fly in from their respective locations. Together, they all went back to Westside, now a thriving metropolis. They met at the school, and as a memento of their class trip ten years earlier, they all took a walk over to the tennis court and argued about the good times.

The girls' varsity soccer team started their season with a record of 2 wins, 2 losses, and 2 ties, and were very confident that a first winning season in years was well within their grasp. However, a four-game drought in which they did not score a single goal all but ended these hopes and from there they girls decided to concentrate on winning in playoff competition. Led by sophomore Julie Kapitan with five goals, and assisted greatly by freshman goalie Candace Sherrer, Westside had a good, solid season and is looking forward to a great future in soccer.

This year's boys' soccer team experienced a great deal of frustration as they struggled through most of the season, although they were not without a few bright spots. An offense led by sophomore Jesse Fowler with seven goals and senior John Pietryka with six was backed by outstanding defensive players in Joe Farley, Todd Popovitch, and goal-keeper Jesse Loomis. The team had some close calls midway through the season, but then played an intense, excitement-filled game in beating MSJ, 3-2 in their last game of the season.

Girls' J.V. Basketball

The Girls' Junior Varsity team had another successful year as it battled to its second consecutive winning season. This year was the second year the girls' J.V. program was brought back to Westside, and they again will be able to boast of being the winningest high school team at West Rutland. The girls have a lot of skilled and talented players on the J.V. team, and hope that in the next few years they will be able to carry their winning ways up to the varsity level.

Girls' Varsity Basketball

The West Rutland Girls' Varsity team provided an exciting year for its fans as it went on to have the best season it had had in years, winning six games, including a few big underdog victories against larger schools such as Leland & Gray and defending Division IV state champs Whitcomb. The season ended in an exciting playoff game at Twinfield High School, where the girls came back from a 15-point deficit but fell short in a 36-35 loss. It was because of the girls coming together and maturing as a team that made for a successful season. The team was led by outstanding individual performances throughout the year, and it would be very difficult to choose a specific few individuals who carried the team. It was, in every definition of the phrase, a team effort, and first-year Varsity coach Ian Akin should be very proud of his team this year.

Boys' Varsity Basketball

The boys' varsity basketball team overcame a rough start in the beginning of the year and ended up with an all-around successful season. They had everything going for them at the end of the season as they won three of their last four games and clinched the Marble Valley League Division D crown for the second time in three years. Carried by co-captains John Pietryka and Greg Czachor along with leading-scorer Todd Popovitch, the Horde beat Whitingham and rival Proctor twice each and went 5-1 in the D Division, which earned Westside a homecourt advantage for the first round of the playoffs. This was the first time a West Rutland varsity basketball team had accomplished that feat since 1991.

Baseball 1997

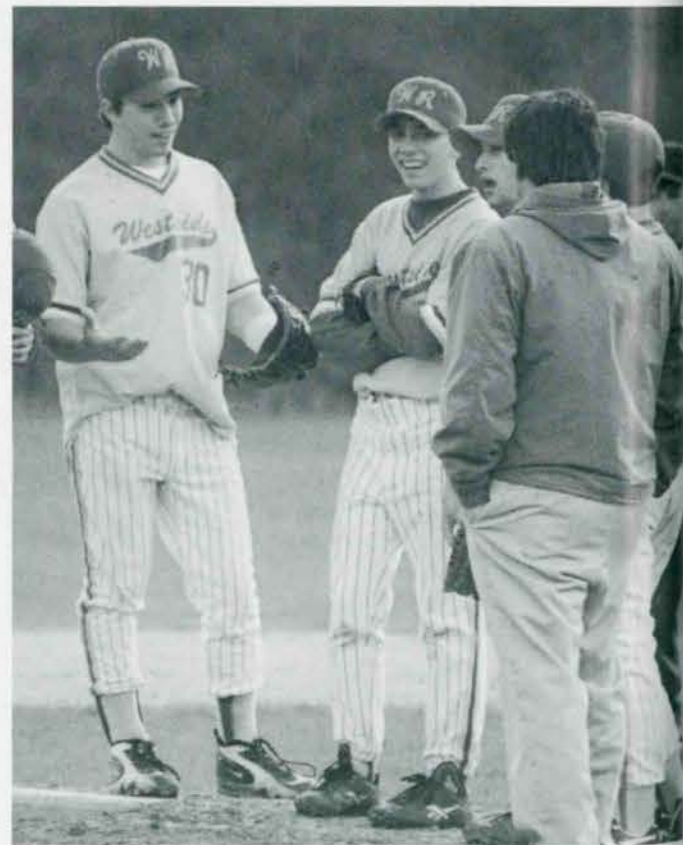

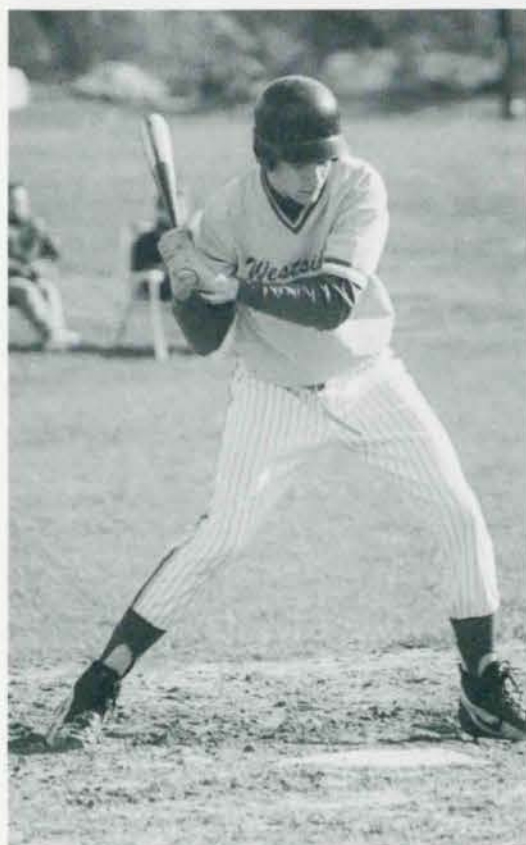

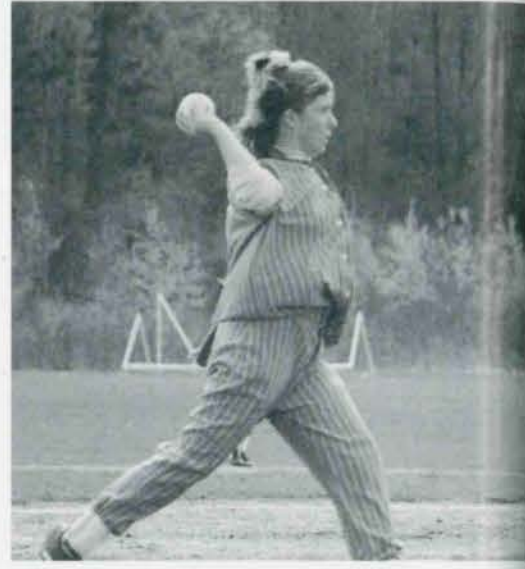

After a frustrating regular season, the boys' baseball team made the decision to travel 3 1/2 hours to face Canaan in a playdown game. They made the trip well worth it as they routed the lowly Canaan crew, 14-6. The game was highlighted by an astonishing six triples off the bats of John Pietryka, Jamie Norton, Greg Czachor, Joe Farley, Todd Popovitch, and since-graduated Ryan Loso. It was a game to remember.

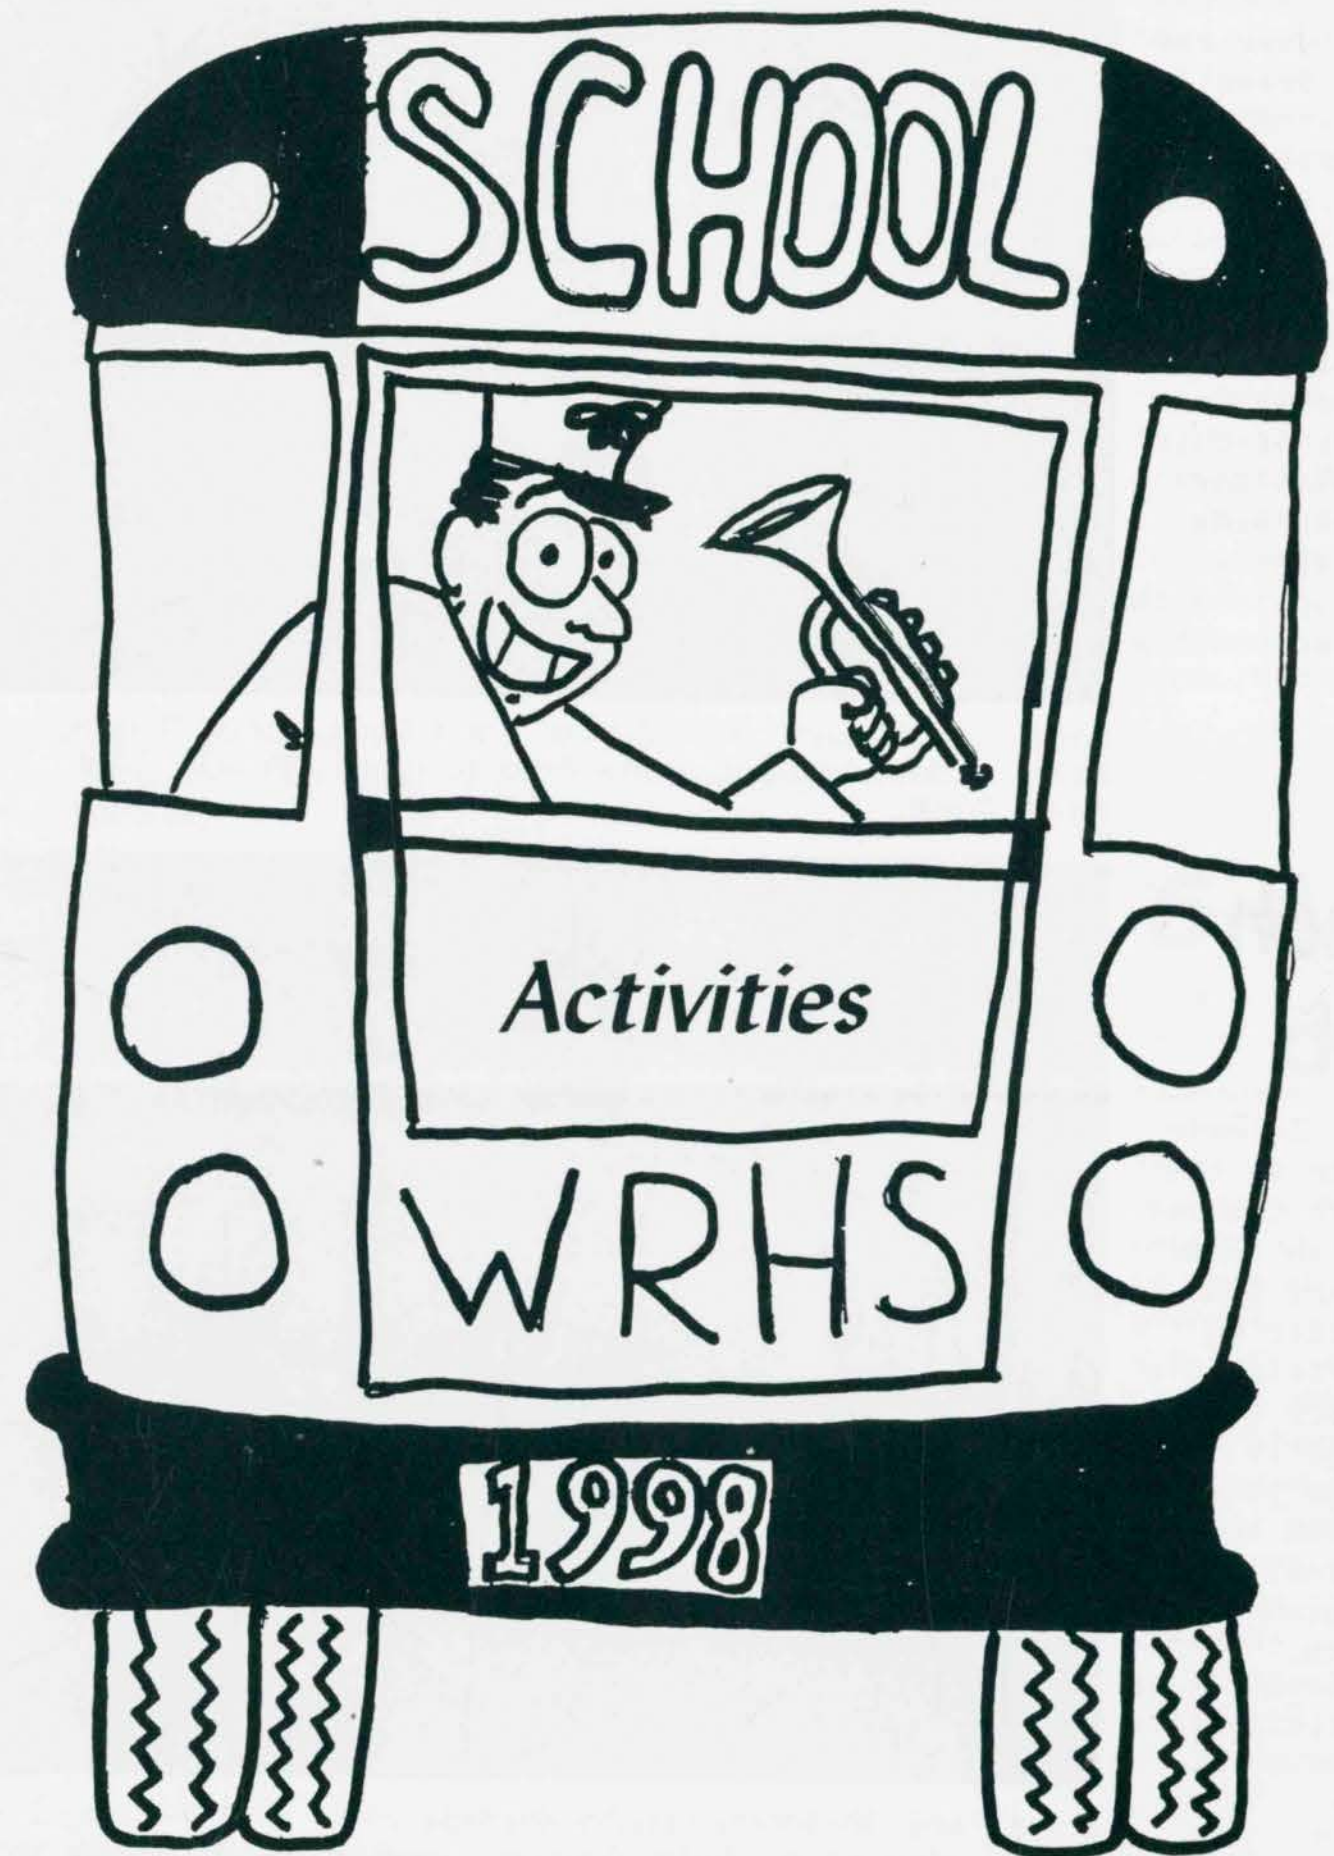

Softball

A veteran team under first-year varsity coach Mike Hewitt, the girls' softball team had a good season by comparison to the last few years, putting together five wins in an exciting year of softball. The girls played some great games with some nice hitting from the likes of Jer Bania, Johnni Galbicsek, Trisha Amaral, and Loren Allen, as well as some great pitching performance by Allison Shull.

This year Mrs. Austin was shocked to see the large turnout when she announced the drama program's first meeting. The usually small program was gifted with a big cast of very talented actors and actresses. The program puts on the play of choice for the school. The high point of this activity is when they enter the state wide drama competition in which they compete with many schools across the state.

The students of the Yearbook class put together the yearbook that you are reading at this very moment. In this half year course, they learned how to use Year Tech '98, create page layouts, and much more. They also went out on an Ad Day to get ads for the yearbook from companies in the community. Thanks to the ads in the back of this yearbook and a hard working Yearbook staff, this book was possible.

You explored the world and learned your first lessons in life together as cousins and as friends. Now you will take your very first steps out into the world together, no longer as children but as fellow graduates. Best of wishes to both of you as you once again begin exploring the world, this time through the eyes of gifted young adults. We are so very proud of both of you for accomplishing your goals, however, we are most proud of the fine young adults you have both become.

I wish you would be and you wherever you want to go in life. You are beautiful through & through. Love Mom & Dad
